About

I'm interested in what makes people pay attention, what makes them stay, and why certain ideas stick with them.

My work brings together marketing, research, writing, and creative production. I enjoy understanding how brands communicate, developing concepts, and figuring out how an idea can become something people actually want to engage with.

My experience spans fashion marketing, independent publishing, educational content, podcast production, and digital projects. I'm particularly interested in brand strategy, creative direction, and the thinking behind successful campaigns.

Rhode: From Influence to Involvement

Independent Marketing Strategy & Creative Concept / Brand studied: Rhode

A dedicated space for the people who know Rhode best.

THE OPPORTUNITY

Rhode has established a distinctive identity through its visual direction, product presentation, and Hailey Bieber's cultural influence. This independent project explores how the brand could develop a closer relationship with everyday customers by creating more opportunities for direct involvement.

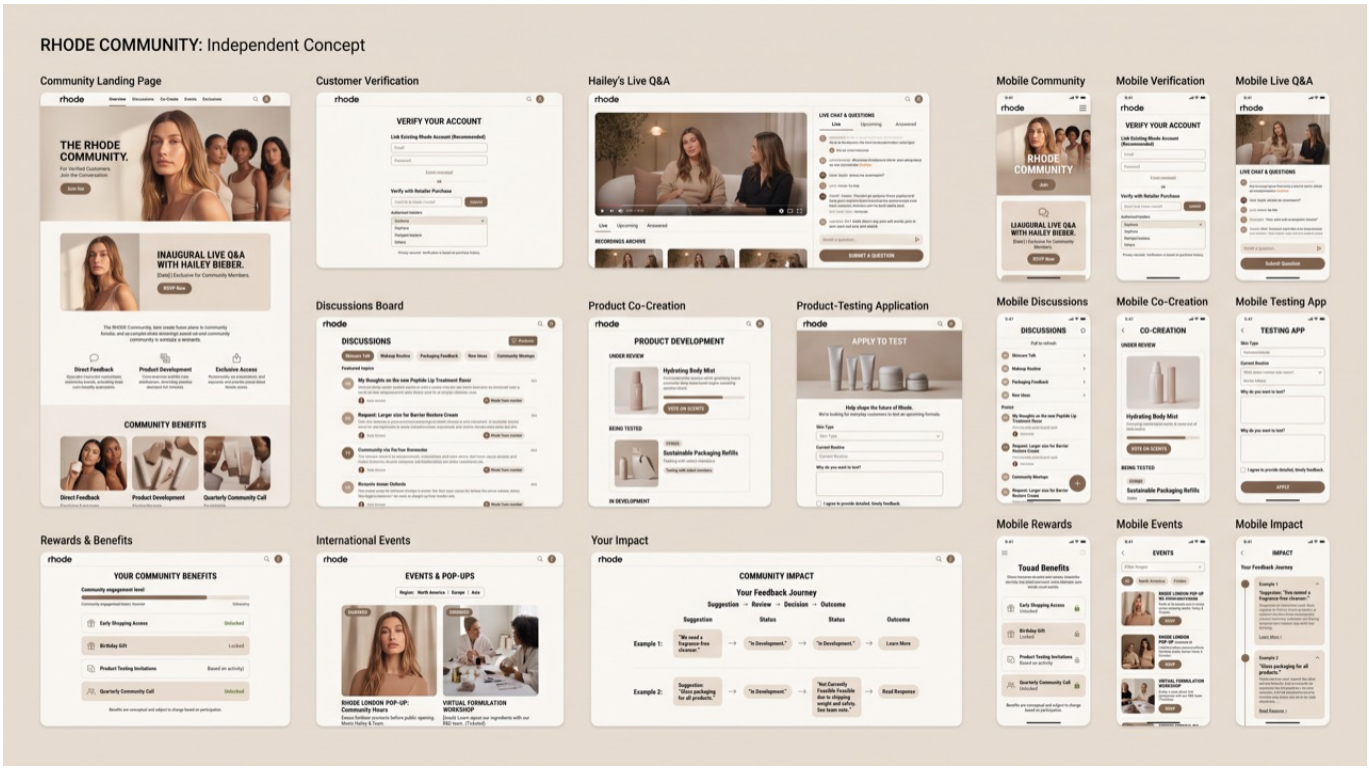

THE PROPOSAL

A verified-customer community within Rhode's existing digital ecosystem, designed to connect feedback, direct conversations, and participation in what comes next.

Independent speculative concept. Not commissioned by, affiliated with, or endorsed by Rhode.

From visibility to participation

An independent strategic observation, not a claim about current brand practice

Early exploration of a customer-centered Rhode digital ecosystem.

COMPLEMENTING INFLUENCE

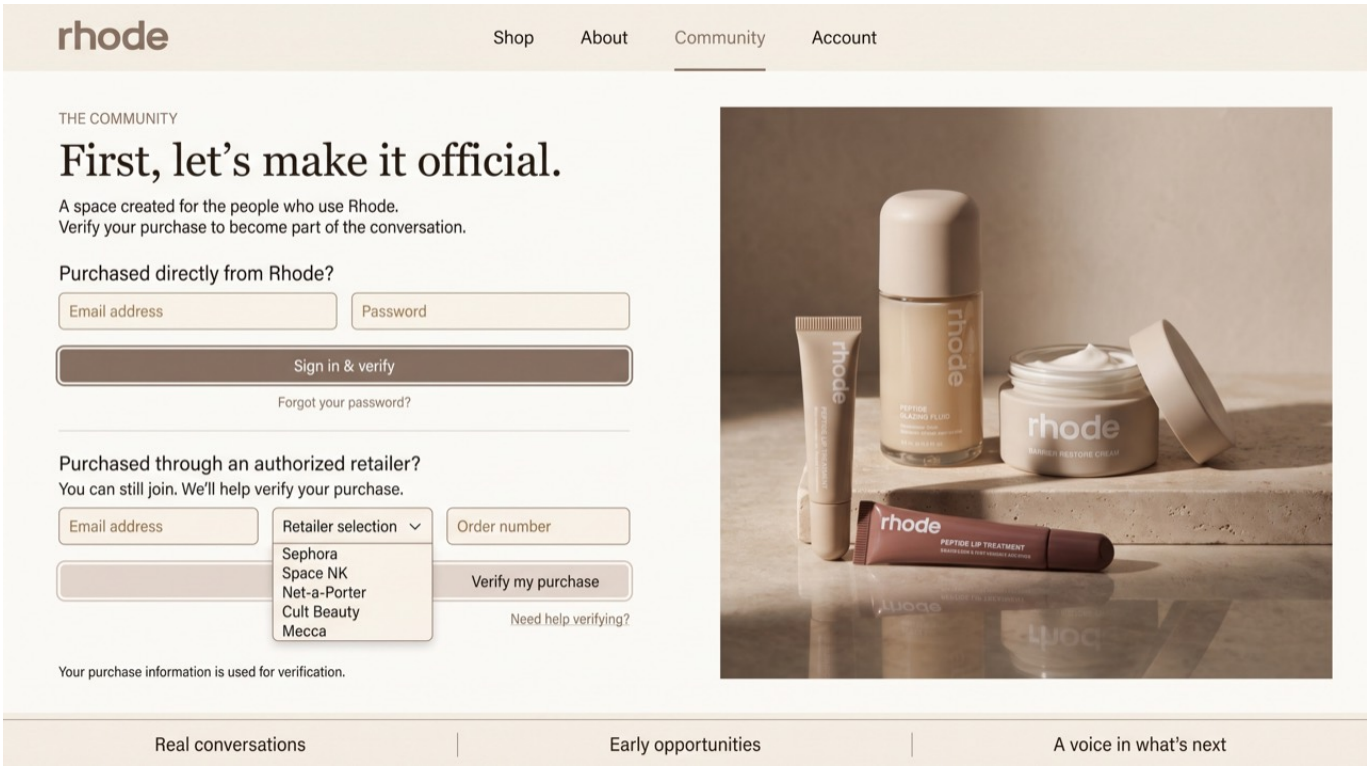

Influencer visibility and everyday customer participation serve different purposes. My hypothesis is that Rhode could build on its existing influence by giving verified customers more direct access to conversation, product feedback, and experiences. The concept does not propose abandoning influencer marketing.

The proposed ecosystem

Product suggestions and voting
Customer-testing applications
Rewards and participation benefits
Direct conversations with the team
International community experiences
Visible updates on customer ideas

Membership starts with customers

Customer Verification & Onboarding

Membership begins with a genuine relationship to the brand.

ACCESS BASED ON CUSTOMERSHIP

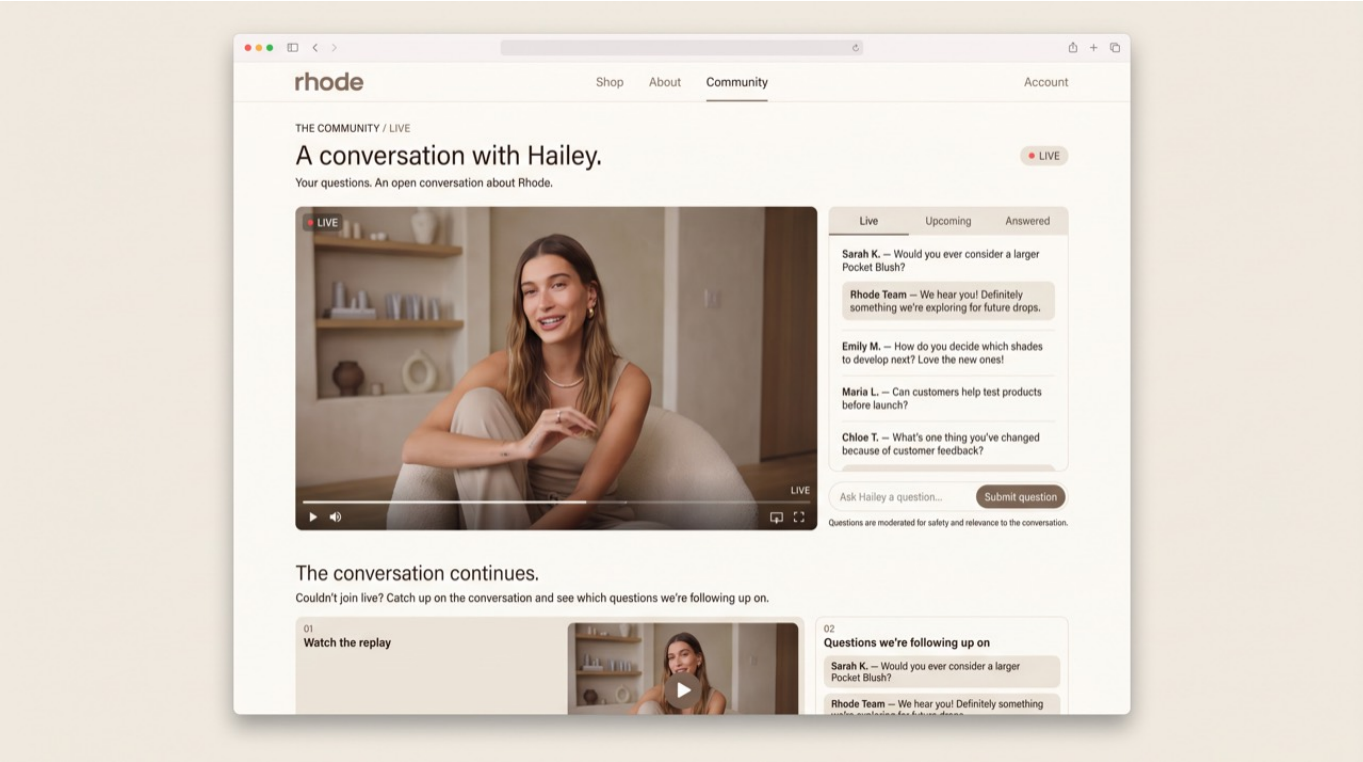

The proposed onboarding flow gives customers a purchase-based route into the community. It distinguishes direct purchases from purchases through authorized retailers, with a verification path for each. Eligibility is central to the strategy: this is intended as a place for people using the products, rather than another audience built only around visibility.

A PROPOSED FLOW, NOT A LIVE INTEGRATION

The interface illustrates the intended customer journey. Retailer verification, account access, and handling of purchase information would need to be designed and tested before implementation. The mockup does not establish that these integrations exist.

A conversation with Hailey

Proposed inaugural community event

A more direct conversation between Hailey and Rhode's customers.

LIVE INTERACTION OVER A PROMOTIONAL FILM

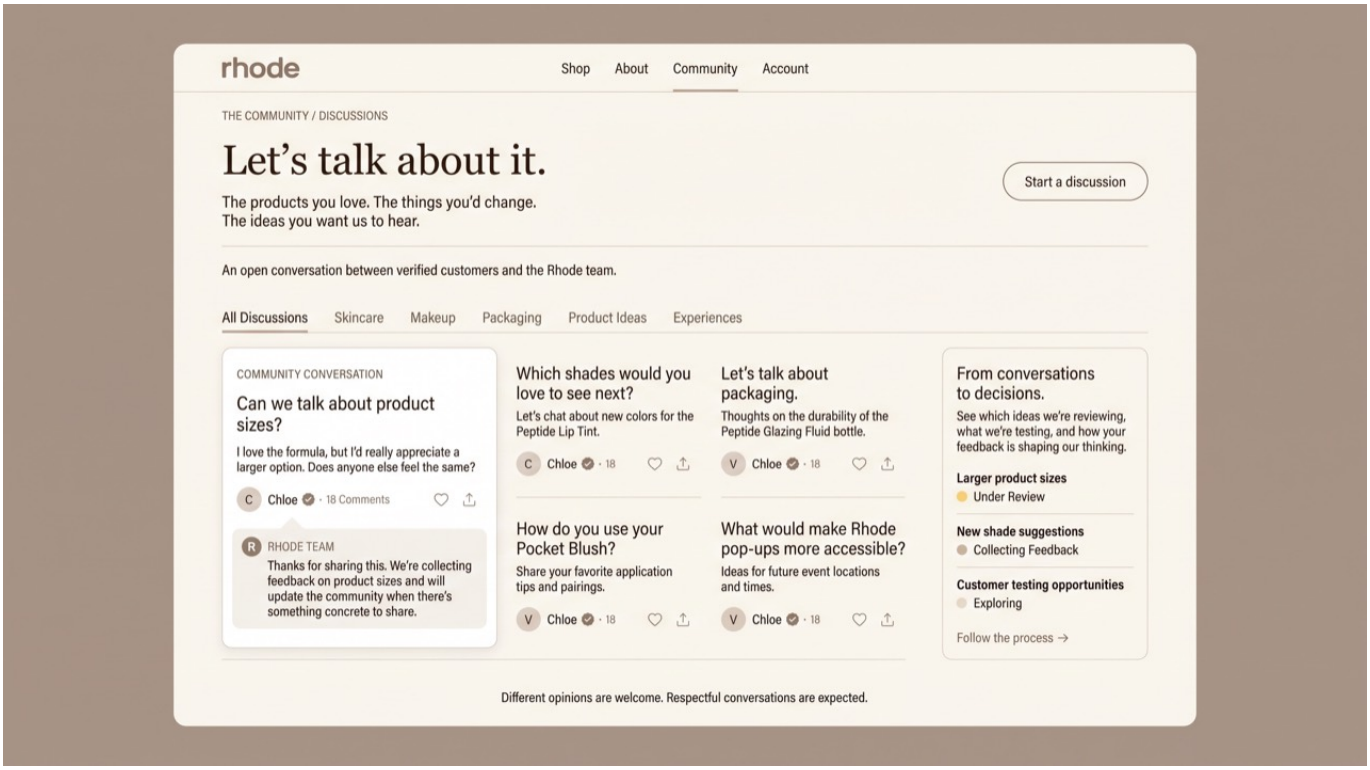

The proposed opening event puts customer questions at the center. A live Q&A could create space for spontaneous answers and the concerns customers bring to the discussion, rather than relying on a highly scripted promotional format.

KEEPING THE CONVERSATION OPEN

The concept includes a replay and a visible follow-up area for unanswered questions. Moderation would support a respectful conversation, while follow-through would keep the event connected to the wider community. Hailey Bieber has not participated in developing this project.

Conversations that lead somewhere

Discussions & Customer Feedback

Customer feedback should lead to conversation and visible follow-through.

VISIBLE RESPONSES

The discussion space makes room for criticism, product suggestions, and responses from the team. A progress area proposes showing what is being reviewed, tested, or explored so contributions have a visible path beyond the original conversation.

Potential strategic value

Stronger relationships, loyalty, repeat engagement, retention, community participation, and customer-led product insights are objectives of the concept, not measured results.

Proposed measurement

Verified membership, meaningful participation, returning members, satisfaction, feedback acted on, testing participation, repeat purchases, and event attendance.

DAXUEN

Marketing Intern / September 2026 to Present

Fashion marketing, from research to production.

My internship brings together campaign ideation, content marketing, advertising research, and creative production. I develop concepts and social content ideas, work with fashion references, and create and revise AI-assisted visual materials.

Campaign and content ideas

I develop creative concepts for fashion marketing and social media, considering the visual references and message behind the material.

Research and references

I examine competitors' marketing and advertising approaches to understand how they use creative formats, messaging, and fashion imagery.

Production and revision

I work on campaign visuals and social media materials, incorporating feedback and revisions. My participation also includes exposure to influencer marketing and advertising activities.

Developing the creative material

Selected responsibilities and working approach

01

Reading the category

Competitor research helps me examine how fashion brands organize their advertising and communicate their products. I focus on creative approaches, message structure, and formats rather than treating another brand's campaign as a template to copy.

02

Working with visual references

Creative references and fashion imagery support the development of campaign ideas. My AI-assisted production work is part of that process, alongside editing and the preparation of social media materials.

03

Revising for the brief

Developing a visual is followed by feedback and revision. My role includes adapting campaign and social materials so the next version responds to the requirements and comments provided.

This experience demonstrates research-led concept development, visual production, and the ability to revise creative material within a professional marketing setting.

BellaBelles Egypt

Creators Program / August to September 2026

Brand-focused content, prepared for a defined brief.

I participated in BellaBelles Egypt's creators program, planning, producing, and delivering visual content according to the brand's requirements. The work centered on the products and brief provided, with agreed creative materials prepared for delivery.

Planning

Developing content around the products and requirements supplied by the brand.

Production

Creating brand-focused visual material for the program's agreed deliverables.

Delivery

Completing and submitting the creative materials required by the program.

This was participation in a creators program, rather than an employee or marketing-management role.

Thy Academia

Founder / 2022 to 2025 / Completed project

Educational content with student life in view.

Thy Academia was an independent educational platform I founded and managed. Its content covered academic life, studying, productivity, and student wellbeing. I researched topics, wrote and published educational material, and managed the content across Instagram and Medium.

Research and writing

Developing educational subjects and turning research into writing that students could understand and use.

Editorial direction

Planning content, choosing topics, and organizing the publication's written and visual communication.

Independent management

Taking responsibility for the platform's content planning, production, and publishing as its founder.

Read on Medium

One subject, different formats

Research / Writing / Content planning / Visual communication

Managing both long-form publishing and social content required me to think about how an educational subject changes when the format changes. Medium supported written development; Instagram supported concise visual communication.

Long-form writing

Researching topics
Developing written explanations
Organizing article structure
Publishing on Medium

Social content

Planning content
Producing graphics and carousels
Communicating ideas visually
Publishing on Instagram

WHAT THE PROJECT DEMONSTRATES

Thy Academia connects research, editorial judgment, and independent project management. It shows my experience sustaining a defined subject area while handling both the writing and visual communication behind the platform.

Content focus

Academic life / Studying / Productivity / Student wellbeing

The Sae Talk

Podcast Creator & Host / Completed project

An independently created podcast exploring personal growth, identity, and everyday experiences.

I developed the concept, planned episodes, wrote scripts, recorded and edited the audio, and published the finished material.

FROM AN IDEA TO FINISHED AUDIO

The project brought editorial planning and production together in one format. Developing the subject and script was followed by recording, editing, and preparing the episode for publication. My role covered both the direction of the podcast and the work needed to produce it.

The Sae Talk is presented here as a completed independent project.

Sarah Safwan

Independent publication / Substack

Long-form writing and editorial judgment.

My independent publication is part of my writing and editorial practice. I develop article ideas, research topics where relevant, write long-form pieces, and edit the material for structure, clarity, and tone.

Subject development

Considering the subject, the perspective I want to take, and how the piece can develop beyond its starting point.

Writing and structure

Developing a longer piece through connected ideas, with attention to the relationship between its paragraphs and overall argument.

Editing

Revisiting the draft to refine the wording, progression, and tone before publication.
