SARAH SAFWAN

INTRO- DUCTION

HELLO, I'M
SARAH SAFWAN!

I am a digital marketing specialist with a passion for storytelling, content creation, and audience engagement. My work sits at the intersection of strategy and creativity, combining marketing insights with meaningful communication to create content that connects with people.

Alongside marketing, I host The Sae Talk, a podcast focused on personal growth, reflection, and the ideas that shape how we live and work. Through every project, I aim to turn ideas into stories and stories into experiences that leave a lasting impact.

WHAT DRIVES MY WORK

I believe effective marketing is built on understanding people. Whether through content, storytelling, research, or strategy, my goal is to create work that feels authentic, meaningful, and impactful. I approach every project with curiosity, creativity, and a focus on building genuine connections between brands and their audiences.

Storytelling

Stories have the power to capture attention, communicate ideas, and create lasting impressions. I use storytelling to make content more engaging, memorable, and human.

Strategy

Creativity is most effective when supported by clear objectives and thoughtful planning. I enjoy combining insights, research, and creativity to achieve meaningful results.

Continuous Growth

Marketing is constantly evolving, which is why I am committed to learning, experimenting, and developing new skills that help me create stronger work and deliver greater value.

WORK & CREATIVE PROJECTS

- LIFE SCULPTOR

Psychology Research Volunteer | 2022-2023

My first professional experience began in the Psychology Department at Life Sculptor, where I volunteered on research-related projects focused on human behavior and psychological wellbeing. Working within a research environment introduced me to the importance of evidence-based thinking, curiosity, and asking meaningful questions before searching for solutions.

My responsibilities included supporting literature reviews, gathering and organizing information, assisting with research activities, and contributing to project documentation. The role required attention to detail, analytical thinking, and the ability to evaluate information from multiple sources.

Although my career direction later shifted toward marketing and content, this experience continues to influence how I approach audience behavior, communication, and strategy. It taught me that understanding people is often the foundation of meaningful work.

- THY ACADEMIA

Founder & Content Creator | 2022-2025

Thy Academia was an educational and student-focused platform I founded to explore the realities of academic life beyond grades and productivity. The platform focused on student wellbeing, personal growth, learning, motivation, and the challenges many students face throughout their educational journeys. Through thoughtful content, I aimed to create a space where students felt understood, supported, and encouraged to approach education in a healthier and more sustainable way.

As the founder, I managed every aspect of the platform independently. I researched and wrote articles, published content on Medium, managed the Instagram account, created visual content, planned content calendars, and developed the platform's overall identity and communication strategy. Throughout the project, I published more than ten long-form articles covering topics related to student life, wellbeing, academic pressure, personal development, and learning.

Building Thy Academia strengthened my skills in writing, content creation, social media management, audience engagement, storytelling, branding, and content strategy. More importantly, it taught me how to build a meaningful platform around real human experiences and create content that resonated with people facing similar challenges and aspirations.

- THE SAE TALK

Founder & Host | 2026-Present

The Sae Talk is a podcast centered on growth, identity, creativity, and the experiences that shape who we become. I created the platform as a space for thoughtful conversations that explore personal development in a way that feels honest, reflective, and human.

As the founder and host, I oversee every stage of production. From developing episode concepts and planning content to scripting, recording, editing, publishing, and promotion, I manage the podcast independently while maintaining a consistent brand identity and creative direction.

Beyond podcast production, The Sae Talk represents my interest in storytelling as a tool for connection. The project has strengthened my skills in content strategy, creative direction, audience engagement, brand building, and communication while allowing me to create meaningful content across multiple platforms.

- SAE WRITES

Writer & Creator | 2026-Present

Sae Writes is my personal writing platform where I explore ideas related to growth, creativity, identity, and the experiences that shape how we understand ourselves and the world around us. The platform serves as a space for reflection, observation, and long-form storytelling, allowing me to engage with topics that extend beyond short-form content and social media.

I independently manage every aspect of the platform, including researching topics, writing articles, editing content, and developing its overall editorial direction. Through long-form writing, I transform thoughts, experiences, and observations into articles designed to encourage reflection, conversation, and meaningful engagement.

Building Sae Writes has strengthened my skills in writing, storytelling, research, editorial content creation, and audience communication. It has also deepened my appreciation for thoughtful content and reinforced the importance of clarity, authenticity, and curiosity in effective communication.

- PERSONAL BRAND & CONTENT CREATOR

Content Creator & Personal Brand | 2026–Present

You can find all my experiences HERE

Alongside my writing and podcasting projects, I actively build and manage a personal brand centered around marketing, storytelling, creativity, and lifelong learning. Through digital content, I share ideas, experiences, and insights while exploring how meaningful communication can connect people and create value.

I create and publish content across multiple platforms, develop content strategies, manage brand positioning, write copy, design visual content, and maintain a consistent voice across my digital presence. My work combines content creation, audience engagement, personal branding, and creative communication.

This ongoing experience has strengthened my skills in content marketing, social media strategy, branding, copywriting, audience engagement, and creative direction. It has also given me hands-on experience building an audience, maintaining a cohesive brand identity, and adapting content to different platforms and communities.
